

SCRAP THE

trap!

Raccoon in the chimney? Groundhog under the shed? Skunk beneath the back porch?

When wild animals move in, you may think that trapping and relocating them to a lush park on the other side of town is a kind way to handle the problem.

Sadly, studies show that nearly all displaced animals soon disappear or die—and any babies left behind suffer the same fate.

Learn how to deal with over 25 species of animals the humane way at humanesociety.org/wildneighbors