

Become a Humane Policy Volunteer Leader

Humane Policy Volunteer Leaders are at the forefront of our efforts to advance priority federal, state and local animal protection legislation and policies.

Responsibilities

- Establish and maintain effective, professional relationships with government officials and encourage their support of the HSUS's priority animal protection positions.
- Develop and implement a local animal protection project, preferably working with your city council or county board of supervisors to advance an HSUS priority ordinance or resolution in your community.
- Encourage your networks to take action on HSUS alerts and priority policies.

Opportunities and Benefits

- Deepen your understanding of the policy process and political landscape in your specific state and at the federal level.
- Be the first to receive breaking animal protection news and access to support and resources that are not provided to the public.
- Opportunity to share your expertise and experiences with community members while collaborating with the HSUS.
- Join a community of others who are committed to advancing humane public policies and the protection of all animals
